A Farm in Landolum

Chapter One

In Landolum, all men of substance got dreams that they should start or support farms. And thus Weinowal went to start a farm.

Weinowal started a farm of five hectares.

God's angel Mephistom spoke to Weinowal saying: Now God said the smallest size of a farm is ten hectares. You see the number of people in heaven is in trillions and we need to eat thrice a day.

No problems was the response of Weinowal.

So by the grace of God, Weinowal contacted his relatives and he was able to raise the sum for a thirty hectare farm.

Chapter Two

It was common sense that since God had given the Lords of sickness reign over men, any good farm would have someone living there so as to provide quick responses to plant related illnesses.

This was followed in Weinowal's farm.

Chapter Three

This is the report of the first year of harvest. Weinowal planted corn and potatoes. The corn did well, but the potato was kissed by the Lords of sickness. And no Seed company in the whole of Landolum could cure the potato.

It was terrible and all the potatoes had to be burnt.

In their depression for the potatoes, angel Mephistom said: it takes three or more years to make profits from some businesses, especially farming.

Chapter Four

During the fifth planting season from his first, the angel Mephistom spoke to Weinowal saying: I have seen your fields and I noticed you planted only corn (maize). Is it only corn that my people would be eating?

Weinowal: It is not as it appears. Half of the planted area is sweet corn. Which is meant for men directly. The other half of the planted area is cow and chicken corn which is not meant for men directly.

Weinowal: I don't have the means to go to all the markets to find what to plant. So I continued with corn. Please tell God to tell me something else to plant.

My loved Son

Chapter One

Goodallum needed a vehicle as all peoples on earth do. God even said that a man who has no vehicle is dead.

He decided to beg his father for a car. He expected a good car since his father had three great markets which he had established more than five years ago.

Chapter Two

His father (Dondama) got him a vehicle. Goodallum didn't appreciate his father by saying thank you. This provoked Dondama to speak saying: My son you don't like the vehicle.

Goodallum: Yes father, this is a 2011 vehicle in the year 2023. Father, I was hoping for a 2018 vehicle.

Dondama: Sorry my son. I was sent by God to start a factory and I haven't done so. I didn't have much so I built those markets to raise the money. I have to build a factory so that I can get closer to heaven.

Chapter Three

Goodallum's mother also spoke after his father left. She said: My son, sorry for the vehicle. God is both father of the poor and rich. And thus we need to also take care of the poor so that we can get closer to heaven.

Goodallum: No problems, mother. I pray you get strengthened for your pursuits.

Plane Crash

Chapter One

It was a strange period indeed, because many movies (some of which are great movies) were released all at the same time.

A mechanic was in the office trying to watch as many movies as possible. He was really learning and getting entertained.

The pilot called on the phone asking whether he had serviced the plane. The mechanic lied saying: yes he had.

The plane flying from Country A fell in Country B.

Chapter Two

On the plane that crashed were three factory bosses, forty farmers, twenty teachers, sixty-one factory men, twelve musicians and some programmers.

Chapter Three

It was the fifth plane to crash in Country B from Country A. After due consultations, the governors of Country A declared the invasion of Country B.

After twenty million people died from the war, Eldora (God of bread and biscuits) came down from Heaven to quench the war.

The Factory Researcher

Chapter One

Donilla, the wealthiest man in his place, had a daughter who was a musician. She was called Eeverick.

She usually thought that she was not making judicious use of her wealth which came from Donilla by singing only.

And thus decided to do factory research since Donilla is the wealthiest man in his place. Her idea was to reduce the cost of laptops.

Chapter Two

Eeverick put out a lot of adverts that she was looking for men who would do factory research for her.

Almost a year passed and nobody came forward. And thus she was depressed.

In her depression, God spoke to her saying there are three thousand (3000) kinds of people and what you seek is not in your environment.

God: Anytime you want to conduct an interview pray to me and if you meet the requirements I would provide those you seek.

And depression vanished.

Chapter Three

So her Research Facility was born.

A factory boss who had issues with the amount of power needed to grind stones needed in his factory, came to Everick's research facility begging for help.

So the men of Everick's research facility had to set up a roster: In a month three weeks will be spent on Everick's problem and the remaining week would be spent on the stone grinding problem.

Chapter Four

While the research went on, Everick got a dream from Brulo the hardworking. It goes thus:

Brulo was dancing. He then said the reason for his dance is that the Lords of sickness had brought one hundred million men to Heaven during the last generation. The Lord of fingers you love only brought a few thousands.

Troubles of the Musician

Chapter One

Sansandum was a great musician. He had three bands thanks to his parents and a market thanks to hard work.

Sansandum always told himself he had no problems since he had a stash of money in his bank accounts.

Anytime he went to buy some things he usually paid more than needed if he felt the seller was almost poor.

Chapter Two

One day God sent Sansandum a dream that he should sing some factory songs.

From the laws of the Lord of Instruments, his Lord: you must sing with the right instruments because instruments are classed.

But there were no instruments for factory songs.

Chapter Three

So he went to meet his sister who had earlier given him six prophecies which all came to pass.

He asked: Sister, how much will it take me to build a factory that makes instruments for factory songs?

She said: Brother, your three bands and a market can only provide twelve percent of the resources needed.

Chapter Four

Sansandum had a dream. It goes thus:

The dream came from Judges of the God of Prayers. His words were accompanied with some imagery. He said: No man born of a woman has been able to solve my puzzle that is to move the earth to one language. Would you?

The dream always repeated in his head.
